

POST-SCRIPTS

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

"What is this news? Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof."

President Coolidge discovers that the business depression is over before the Democrats got around to finding out that we had one.

Earl Carroll obtains a parole with a puritanical string to it that will take all the fun out of the welcome-home by Broadway. And this is what is now, in America, called freedom!

What's delaying Attorney General Sargent in demanding that before he let's Earl Carroll out he must promise not to violate the Fordney-McCumber law and the interstate Commerce act?

Now that Peppy's Diary has been dramatized it is understood that Dave Belasco will produce "The Telephone Directory."

And where could Channing Pollock find more admirable characters than in Who's Who?

The anniversary of the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne has been celebrated in New York for the third time this year. Big Bill Thompson's crusade against King George appears to be bearing fruit.

Dr. Ballou invents a system whereby every pupil in school will be promoted at the end of the year. Who said we would not live to see the millennium?

Our own private guess as to why the Western radicals have deserted the Lowden boom is that they were actuated by the instinct as described in the proverbial desertion of the sinking ship.

Senator Borah, who is reported to be interested in having any information that the Fifteenth amendment is being violated, is respectfully referred to the little editorial entitled "Can You Answer These?" which we have just read, on page 6.

The argument of the Defenders of the Constitution seems to be that if a State by legislative enactment nullifies an amendment, that's all right, but if a bootlegger with a pint of gin does it the Coast Guard must be called out and $30,000,000 per annum appropriated. Watch your step, Dixie!

Lindbergh discovers that going to Baltimore is not such an easy thing as hopping to Paris.

But if Mr. Vic Berger is as keen for the overthrow of prohibition as he seems, why doesn't he have the Socialist party put its O. K. on King Al?

Indianapolis mechanic is convicted of obtaining whisky on his doctor's order for his 12-year-old daughter, who was ill. Our criminal classes should let their off-spring die.

President Coolidge admits there has been some falling off in the net receipts of the railroads. However, conditions ought to improve pretty soon now—we note that the Erie has filed suit against a commuter at Hackensack, N. J., for 92 cents.

"Yo, ho, ho, and a bottle of rum!" We trust that the Antislavery League doesn't read this cheering bit of news to the effect that the British sailors on the visiting cruises in the Eastern Branch are served their grog regularly at eight bells.

Many American citizens in Uncle Sam's Navy are said to be visiting his Majesty's subjects on the British fleet.

"My country, 'tis of thee, Sweet land of liberty—God save the King!"

We gather that from now on the "Dogs of War" are going to be required to wear their muzzles. "Can't oo talk?"

Doc Copeland feels the palpitating pulse of the West and finds it suffering from a severe attack of almitithis.

Dr. Howard retires as chief entomologist of the Agricultural Department to devote himself exclusively to research. He has quite a bug on the subject.

Maine defeats the repeal of the primary law, and the chances are that the country as a whole will stick to it until it can think of something worse.

It is something of a shock to our military pride to learn that the chief of staff of the German army has come to the United States to study our methods of tating and basket weaving.

Our Marines in Nicaragua cut a few more nicks in their gunstocks.

We thank the Rockville Chamber of Commerce for not demanding that we locate our new center market at Point of Rocks.

67 BANDITS FALL BATTLING MARINES AND CONSTABULARY

Four of the Nicaraguan Force Are Killed in Hot Encounter.

GROUP OF 40 FIGHT OFF 300 ATTACKERS

Machine Guns Are Silenced by Americans, Who Lose All in Making Retreat.

Managua, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—American Marines and Nicaraguan constabulary, in search of the missing Marine Corps aviators, Second Lieut. E. A. Thomas and Sergt. Frank E. Dodel, have engaged in battle with bandit contingents, killing or wounding 67 of them. Four members of the constabulary were killed, but there were no casualties among the Marines.

A contingent of 600 constabulary is being formed to be dispatched against Gen. Sandino, whose activities are increasing in Nueva Segovia. It was near Quilali, in this department, that the machine in which Thomas and Dodel were flying some weeks ago crashed and was burned. The two men were seen to run from the wreckage, but attempts to rescue them were frustrated by large numbers of bandits.

Searching for Airmen.

Lieut. George J. J. O'Shea, U. S. Marine Corps, commanding a constabulary detachment at Jicar, with Lieut. J. B. O'Neill, Marine Corps, U. S. Navy, sends a report of a forced march to Quilali in search of Lieut. Thomas and Sergt. Dodel with joint forces of 40 Marines and constabulary. On account of the long distance from Jicar the report has been delayed. It tells of terrific fighting between the bandits and Marines, when the resulting patrol of 40 was suddenly attacked by bandits numbering 300 from three sides. Heavy execution was inflicted on the bandits by several of the Marines in individual engagements, and Lieut. O'Shea's life was saved by Private Kenneth, who killed a bandit at close quarters.

The report just received tells of the expedition which went immediately in search of the missing American aviators after they had presumably been carried off by the bandits.

Report Tells of Battle.

The patrol left in the morning of September 9, advancing cautiously in the vicinity of the crashed plane, on Supotilla Mountain, 6 miles northwest of Quilali, was suddenly attacked from three sides by a bandit force of 300, well armed and with plenty of ammunition and dynamite bombs.

The patrol fought courageously against the superior numbers, but was forced to withdraw and fight its way to the rear. Lieut. O'Neill and Private Henry McKenzie, at the rear, effectively used hand grenades and automatic weapons.

Menjou in Hospital Following Collapse

Special to The Washington Post. Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 18.—Following a collapse due to stomach trouble, Adolphe Menjou, Paramount-Famous Players-Lasky star, was taken to the California Lutheran Hospital today. No visitors were permitted to see him. Dr. P. G. White, in charge of the case, denied that Menjou's condition was in any way alarming, but said it required confinement to bed for two or three weeks.

Monkeys Given Virus Of Infant Paralysis

New York, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Four monkeys isolated in cages at Willard Parker Hospital today were prospective martyrs to science, although they did not know it. In their veins were the germs of infantile paralysis, injected in an attempt to discover a cure for the disease.

Dr. Josephine B. Neal, in charge of the experiment, said they had received the virus Saturday in secretions from infantile paralysis patients and, although there had been insufficient time to observe the effect of the injections, the monkeys appeared to have a fever and from time to time would pass their hands across their low brows. Sixteen other monkeys are candidates for similar experiments which probably will be conducted within a few days, she said.

Republican in Lead For Crumpacker Seat

Portland, Oreg., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Scattered returns from 24 voting precincts tonight gave Franklin F. Korell, Republican, a slight margin over Elton Watkins, Democrat, in a contest for representative in Congress from the Third Congressional District.

The post was left vacant by the death of Maurice E. Crumpacker. Early returns gave Korell 920; Watkins, 600.

GIVEN LIBERTY

EARL CARROLL.

CARROLL GETS PAROLE CONDITIONED ON ARIDITY

Producer, of Bathing Party Fame, Also Barred From Places Serving Liquor.

SARGENT SIGNS RELEASE

(Associated Press.)

Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, will be released from the Atlanta Penitentiary within the next few days.

The recommendation of the parole board for his release was approved yesterday by Attorney General Sargent and papers were forwarded immediately to the warden of the penitentiary directing him to liberate the prisoner.

Carroll began serving a sentence of a year and a day June 8 for perjury in connection with his famous bath tub party on the stage of a New York theater. He became eligible for parole on October 8, and on Monday, the board passed favorably on his application. This action, however, did not become known until yesterday, when it was announced by the Attorney General.

In addition to his prison sentence, Carroll was fined $2,000. He was described in the parole application as a model prisoner with a marked improvement in health after his collapse on his way to prison, when he was removed from the train and kept for some time in a Greenville, S. C., hospital.

Conditions under which Carroll's parole was granted include one that during the term of his parole he is not to frequent saloons or other places where intoxicating liquors are "sold or furnished, and that he will not drink intoxicating beverages."

Carroll also will be required to abstain during the time of his parole from associating with persons of bad reputation, in all respects to conduct himself honorably and work diligently and honestly for himself and his employer and to avoid "violating the law."

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Earl Carroll probably will be released from the Federal penitentiary here Thursday, when informed of the Attorney General's action in approving the New York theatrical producer's parole.

Snook explained that the Attorney General's order of "immediate parole" for Carroll meant simply that no specific date was set for his release. Under the usual procedure, he will be freed as soon as formalities are completed.

This will entail Carroll's signature to his parole papers and, since they must be forwarded by mail from Washington, it probably will be Thursday before his release is arranged.

PRIMARY LAW REPEAL DEFEATED IN MAINE

Returns From 582 Out of 633 Precincts Show 2 to 1 Against Change.

Portland, Me., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—The voters of Maine in no uncertain terms today repudiated a movement to repeal the direct primary law and return to the caucus and convention method of nominating candidates for public office. The law was enacted in 1911.

In a special State election, held on a referendum seeking repeal of the primary system, the vote, with returns missing from 51 election precincts, maintained the existing law by a 2-to-1 majority. The returns from 582 election precincts out of 633 in the State, representing 468 cities and towns out of 1,519, gave: For repeal, 19,424; against repeal, 35,353.

The fight to repeal the primary was headed by Gov. Ralph O. Brewster, while the leader of the opposing forces was former Gov. William T. Cobb, of Rockland.

Texas Cowboy, 97, Hurt in Fall Out of Bed

Childress, Tex., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Reese Barton, 97 years old, who says he is the oldest active cowboy in the world, met his first serious accident here when he fell out of bed and broke his collarbone. He is in a hospital, but expects to be back in the saddle soon.

BERGER SAYS SMITH WILL BE NOMINATED; PREDICTS ELECTION

Third (Radical) Party Is Still Needed, Holds Socialist Chief.

URGES STRONG FIGHT ON PROHIBITION LAW

Would Withdraw Federal Enforcement, Trusting Rest to Inertia.

Special to The Washington Post. New York, Oct. 18.—Victor L. Berger, veteran Socialist representative from the Milwaukee district, whose election as successor of Eugene V. Debs as head of the Socialist party of the United States, was announced today, says he sees nothing to prevent the nomination of Gov. Smith of New York by the Democrats in 1928, and predicts Smith's nomination.

Mr. Berger says the overthrow of prohibition is so sufficiently important to warrant a strong wet plank in the Socialist platform next year. Unless the Nation soon has a President of progressive principles and policies it will, in Mr. Berger's own words, "go to hell." To bring about the overthrow of prohibition he wants to see Federal enforcement of the dry law withdrawn, and enforcement left wholly to the States, in which case enforcement will die of inertia and prohibition will be of no effect.

"All the radicals don't think and all who are dissatisfied with prohibition will vote for Al Smith if he is the candidate next year. All the radicals who think will vote the Socialist ticket," said the Milwaukee representative, who is at the Hotel Astor.

Smith to Carry South.

"If nominated next year Al Smith not only will carry the solid South, despite its religious prejudices against a Catholic, but he also will carry his own State, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut and probably Kentucky and Illinois, even if Coolidge is renominated," said Mr. Berger. "He may carry one or two more close States if Hughes runs and he surely would if Dawes or Lowden should be the Republican candidate. Lowden would be impossible. He is the son-in-law of the late George M. Pullman, the oppressor of labor. Pullman, unwittingly, was the main factor in making Eugene V. Debs a national leader. If the Democrats don't nominate Al, their candidate will be hopeless, and it would make no difference who they chose to head their ticket."

"I don't see anything that will prevent Smith's nomination. After he is elected I would urge him to bring about legislation that would throw the burden of dry law enforcement onto the various States, and withdrawal of Federal enforcement altogether. This would be adherence to the theory of States' rights, to which the Democratic party is supposed to be devoted."

Man and 4 Children Killed at Crossing

Cambridge, Ohio, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Five persons, four of them children, were killed and a fifth child was seriously injured this afternoon when a Pennsylvania passenger train struck an automobile south of here. The dead are:

Russell I. Cox, 38, driver; Ralph Cox, 7, Russell's son; Raymond Kostelenki, 7; William Gooden, 7; Willard B. Breeden, 7.

Stephen Gould, 7, suffered fractured skull and is in a serious condition.

The accident occurred in a rainstorm. The elder Cox, cashier in a Bysville bank, had driven to a school and was taking the children home.

All Pupils to Be Promoted Under New School System

Child Failing in One or Two Subjects Not to Be Left Back, Ballou Explains, but to Advance in Group of Similar Mentality.

Every school child in the District will be promoted when the system of grouping pupils according to how bright they are is thoroughly established here, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, declared yesterday at the opening meeting of the season of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, in the Department of the Interior Building.

Under this system, which is gradually being put into effect in the District, "Johnny" will begin the new school year at the point where he left off in June. He will not have to back-track over ground he had previously mastered just because he happened to fail in one or two subjects, Dr. Ballou explained.

The new system will be established in the city when the schools have grown large enough that all grades may be divided into two or three classes, Dr. Ballou said. Under the arrangement

GERMAN MINE STRIKERS BOMB RAILROAD TRACKS

Reds Strengthen Control of Movement; British and Poles Giving Aid.

BERLIN FEARS DARKNESS

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Berlin, Oct. 18.—Serious news reached Berlin from the strike area tonight. The pit owners of the Elbe River district sent an SOS to the government stating that strikers had blown up the railway track with hand grenades and were terrorizing the countryside. The Saxony government dispatched police and emergency service men to Boehlen and Hirschfeld, with orders to supply coal to hospitals and public institutions at all costs.

The right wing Christian MinersUnion issued a manifesto guaranteeing to each member striking four weeks' full pay.

The Reds, numbering a third of the strikers, strengthened their control of the strike movement today. The miners' organization in the Ruhr district are assisting the strikers of central Germany by framing new wage demands and threatening also to strike. British miners expressed their solidarity, while the Miners International will hold a meeting at Warsaw Thursday to devise means of supporting the Germans in their struggle. They plan to prevent the movement of coal into Germany from surrounding countries.

The main battle centers at the Golpa works, which provide one-third of Berlin's electricity. Reds succeeded in inducing the Golpa men to join the strike. Berlin officials assure the public that they can bring the necessary electricity to Berlin from other stations, but Halle and Halberstadt already

Trusty and 9 Prisoners Break Jail in Ohio

St. Clairsville, Ohio, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Ten prisoners escaped from the county jail here today by sliding down a rope made from blankets after Russell Gilmore, trusty, sentenced yesterday to one to seven years in the State penitentiary for larceny, picked a lock to the cell block.

Eighteen other inmates refused to join Gilmore in his break. Most of the escaped prisoners were awaiting trial for burglary.

Roumanian Cabinet Member Sent to Jail

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Dispatches from Bucharest report that the Roumanian minister of public health, Dr. Nicholas Lupu, has been sentenced to imprisonment for 40 days for assaulting a policeman at the time of the recent elections.

When Premier Bratianu learned of the verdict, he remarked laughingly, "our next cabinet council will have to be held in the minister's cell."

EDDIE STINSON MISSING WITH FIVE IN AIRPLANE

Machine, Overdue in 100-Mile Flight in New England, Is Believed Down.

Boston, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Five hours overdue on a short 100-mile hop from Hartford, Conn., to Boston, Eddie Stinson, Detroit airplane designer and builder, and a party of five friends, including his wife and a German baron, were missing late tonight, presumably forced down somewhere by a cold, blustering northeaster, which has lashed the New England Coast all day.

They hopped off from Hartford at 4 p. m. today on the last lap of an 18,000-mile air tour in the interest of airport promotion. They should have reached Boston in two hours, but at 11 p. m. they had not been heard from. At that hour State and local police of Natick, Framingham and Sherborn were investigating reports that a big plane had gone down in the woods near Natick-Sherborn line.

Besides Stinson and his wife the plane carried Philip Ashby, J. T. Whitaker, Stinson's mechanic; Fred Koeler and Baron Ravene Barnekow, a German aviator.

Wife Jumps to Death At Mate's Command

Litchfield, Ill., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—"Jump!" cried Charles Brewer to his wife yesterday when he saw that a Wabash train was about to strike the "L" in which they were riding near Mount Olive, Ill.

Mr. Brewer, 34 years old, jumped, his head struck the pavement and he was killed. Brewer had not time to leap and was uninjured.

COOLIDGE CONSIDERS BUSINESS RECESSION PAST, OUTLOOK GOOD

Reassures Country on Basis of Data From Cabinet Members.

DECREASE REPORTED AMONG UNEMPLOYED

Drop in Railroad Earnings Attributed to Prosperity and Wider Use of Autos.

By CARLISLE BARGERON. Reassurance on business conditions was given the country yesterday by President Coolidge. Information given to him by members of the cabinet as to the effect that the temporary recession has been passed and that the outlook for the future is encouraging.

All factors considered—improved business conditions, a decrease in the number of strikes as compared with last year, lessening of the number of unemployed—indicate to the President that the country is in fairly good economic condition and no material change is expected.

There has been some falling off in the net receipts of railroads, according to the President's information, but no decrease in the volume of business done. There has been some diminution in passenger traffic, but rather than indicating a lessening of prosperity it reflects just the reverse, in his opinion. What it does mean, as he sees it, is that more automobiles are coming into use and an economic condition that permits this is a healthy one. And a considerable increase is looked for in the automobile industry, he made known.

Coal Decline Explained.

Shipments of coal have not been so heavy, but the explanation for this lies, in his opinion, in the fact that the coal fields are being worked out, and the coal is being stockpiled up, and are now using up these stocks. The coal strike, on the other hand, has largely been settled, according to Secretary of Labor Davis' report to the President. Settlement has been effected in Illinois, most of Indiana and a considerable portion of Ohio.

The number of strikes as a whole for the first nine months of the year were only 27 as compared with 50 for the corresponding period last year. This, in the opinion of the President, indicates a feeling of general contentment on the part of labor. Unemployment is reported decreasing.

Crops with the exception of cotton are fully as good as last year, the President believes. The corn crop was reported as having increased very materially over what had been expected because of warm weather in the last two weeks. Prices for corn are not as high as had been expected, but are fully as good as those last year.

Cattle prices, he made known, are very high, and the sheep and hog raising industries are in fair condition. Wheat prices he considers are fair.

Blowing Rock, N. C., Is Visited by Snow

Blowing Rock, N. C., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—This section had its first snowstorm of the season today.

Driven by a high wind the snow fell throughout the day, but melted as fast as it hit the ground until nighttime, when the temperature began to drop sharply.

FATHER KILLED AND SON DYING IN AERO CRASH

Portsmouth, Ohio, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—William Cottrell, 50, of Cleveland, Ohio, was fatally injured here this afternoon when the biplane in which he and his son, Chester, 27, crashed in making a forced landing in a corn field near the county infirmary. It was said injuries to the younger Cottrell probably would prove fatal.

Cleveland, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—William Cottrell, 50, killed, and his son, Chester, 27, seriously injured, in an airplane crash near Portsmouth today, were on their way to Miami, Fla. They were making their way to that city by taking up passengers. They had several planes operating in and around Cleveland.

Stork Pays Woman 2 Visits in 5 Days

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—When Mr. and Mrs. Albert Springer became the parents of a 4½-pound girl last week they were happy, but when five days later another daughter, weighing a pound more, was born, they were happier.

The father is a twin and there are four sets of twins in the mother's own family.

Crisis in Albanian Cabinet Is Reported

Two Women and Ten Men Chosen on Jury for the Teapot Dome Trial.

ROBERTS PRESENTS PROSECUTION VIEWS

Martin W. Littleton Begins His Statement of Position Taken by the Defense.

BRIEF SPEECHES START BIG COURT CONTEST

Panel to Pass on Charges Represents Cross-Section of American Life.

By ALBERT W. FOX. With dramatic suddenness the preliminaries in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial were cut short at fifteen minutes past 12 o'clock yesterday, and the great legal battle is now on full blast.

The jury of ten men and two women was finally selected at that hour, and opening statements by the Government and by the defense outlined the salient features involved in the charge of conspiracy against Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, and Harry F. Sinclair, New York oil magnate, as well as the basic facts which will form the groundwork of their defense.

Owen J. Roberts, of Government's special counsel, fired the opening broadside for the prosecution, summarizing the essence of the indictment in a 20-minute address to probably be broken today and he will play an active and major role throughout the proceedings.

William E. Leahy, who with Mark B. Thompson, of New Mexico, represents Fall, entered vigorously into the battle yesterday, the occasion being the examination of one of the prospective jurors who first said he had formed an opinion on the case, then said he had discarded the opinion and wound up by reasserting his original position after claiming that he really had only half an opinion. This changed attitude brought District Attorney Peyton Gordon into the battle on the Government's side and Leahy on the other.

Daughter Accompanies Fall.

Fall looked better than he felt when he arrived about 10 o'clock. He had had a good night, but added that Mrs. Fall was confined to her bed with a sick headache and was unable to be in court. The severe cold from which Fall has been suffering has left him with a soreness in the right side of the chest, a heritage from the attack of double pneumonia which he suffered more than a year ago. The draft from an open window in the courtroom seemed to strike directly at Fall's chest, but aside from this inconvenience he said he felt fairly well.

His daughter, Mrs. Chase, accompanied him to court yesterday morning, and during the early proceedings Justice Siddons ordered a five-minute recess and Fall and his daughter went into the corridor in order that Mrs. Chase might administer medicine ordered by the doctor. During the luncheon recess Fall and Mrs. Chase hurried back to their hotel, where Mrs. Fall was still ill.

Mrs. Sinclair Wears Black.

Mrs. Harry F. Sinclair, becoming attired in a simple black frock, was at her accustomed place in company with Mrs. Phoebe Sinclair, the defendant's aged mother, who followed the proceedings with the keenest interest despite that she is approaching 80. The court attendants, at the suggestion of the marshal, have arranged seats for the Sinclair and Fall families in the left wing of the courtroom, which is a change from the proceeding followed during the Fall-Doherty trial when the members of the Fall and Doherty families had seats at the right.

The reason for this change, it was explained yesterday, to guard the women members of the defendants' families from inconveniences caused by newspaper men and others who come and go at frequent intervals and necessarily disturb those seated about them. As it is both Mrs. Fall and Mrs. Sinclair st facing the ten men and two women of the jury who have the fate of the defendants in their hands, whereas under proper instructions in the court, it is necessary for jurymen to turn their heads to see those in the right wing of the courtroom.

Crowd Overflows Courtroom.

As usual there was an overflow crowd outside the courtroom door despite the inclement weather. The few seats available to spectators were quickly taken after Justice Siddons opened court shortly after 10 o'clock.

More or less routine preliminaries having to do with selection of the jury preceded the enlivening flare-up which removed and that he would continue with that opinion until evidence had overborne it if he were selected as a juror.

played in a trunk establishment and living at 5350 Conduit road, had entered the box as a prospective juror. He said, in response to questions by Maj. Gordon, that he had discussed the case and read about it.

"Have you formed any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendants?" Gordon asked.

"Well, partly," he replied.

"Of course you understand that you are to try the case upon the evidence, the sworn evidence presented at the trial?"

"Yes, sir, I do."

Could Lay Aside Opinion.

"And you feel that you could render a fair and impartial verdict on the evidence adduced before you here, under proper instructions in the court, irrespective of any notions that you might now have relative to the defendants?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are you prepared to lay aside that opinion entirely when you go into the jury box and give the defendants the presumption of innocence?"

"Well, yes, I would have to."

This appeared to pave the way for the acceptance of Goulder so far as the Government was concerned, but George Hoover began a deep probe into the opinions of the prospective juror. Goulder said he had not read the papers very thoroughly about the case but had discussed it with two or three members of the jury.

"Did you express any opinion to the jurors about the case?" Hoover asked.

"I might have."

"Well, do you remember whether you did or not?"

"Perhaps I did."

"Your best recollection is that you did express an opinion to your fellow jurors, is that right?"

"Yes, I did."

Hoover Challenges Juror.

Later Goulder said he had some conviction, but it was not very strong, and then he added that he had a fixed opinion which it would require evidence to remove and that he would continue with that opinion until evidence had overborne it if he were selected as a juror.

"Your honor, I challenge the talesman for cause," said Hoover.

Maj. Gordon then stepped into the breach and Goulder, in response to a question, said he would give the defendant the presumption of innocence and that he would not allow his opinion to influence him in the slightest. He added that if sworn as a juror he would completely lay aside his opinion.

Hoover then took the prospective juror again in hand and Goulder said he would have the opinion if he entered the box and that it would require evidence to change it, whereupon Hoover again challenged the talesman.

Judge Siddons then undertook to probe the mind of the prospective juror.

By the Court:

"Q. Now, I understood you to say Mr. Goulder, in response to questions by the Court just now that notwithstanding the opinion that you had formed under the circumstances which you have stated here, yet, if sworn as a juror in this case, you could absolutely lay aside that opinion and consider and determine this case exclusively upon the evidence that would be adduced here before you, and upon the law as the court would give you; is that correct or not?—That is correct, your honor. I just said this well, I merely spoke that these things were still in my mind, and unless something came up it would not be entirely absent."

Leahy Cross-Examines.

It looked at this point as if Goulder would be selected and made subject only to peremptory challenge. Leahy proceeded, then, as follows, to cross-examine and press the point made by the defense.

By Mr. Leahy:

"Q. How recently did you talk to your fellow jurors here on the panel?"

"—A. I think it was perhaps on Saturday."

"Q. You had an opinion then, did you not?"

"—A. Yes, sir."

"Q. Did you assume that evidence to be true when you read it in the papers?"

"—A. Not absolutely true, no."

"Q. Did you believe any part of it to be true when you read it?"

"—A. Well, yes."

"Q. Now, upon what you read in the papers, and upon the belief you formed, on so much thereof as you did believe, you had an opinion in your mind as to the guilt or innocence of these defendants did you not?"

"—A. Well, yes, partially so."

"Q. And you expressed that opinion to your fellow jurors, did you not?"

"—A. Well, I suppose so. I said I think I did, but I am not sure."

Calls For Recollection.

"Q. What is your best recollection about it? We just want to try to get the facts, that is all?"

"—A. Well, I can't say positively about that. Now, some times you can, perhaps, be sitting and something is spoken of a thing, and you may express an opinion from discussing it, from what I have read or something like that I take it, I think I did, but I am not absolutely sure."

"Q. This conversation as you now recall it took place only last Saturday, did it not?"

"—A. Not Saturday, but Friday. We did not sit on Saturday."

"Q. In this courtroom?"

"—A. Yes, sir."

"Q. You were discussing among yourselves the fact that this case was coming on for trial?"

"—A. Yes, sir."

"Q. And you mentioned to your fellow jurors that you had read the newspapers, and that you had an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of these defendants at the time?"

"—A. Perhaps so."

"Q. Is that not substantially what you told your fellow jurors?"

"—A. And did you ask them how they felt about it?"

"—A. Well, I am not sure whether I did or not. I don't think I did. No, I don't think I asked them what they felt about it."

"Q. Whether you asked them what they felt about it or not, did they express to you any opinion as to how they felt about it?"

"—A. Now, I can't recall anything they said about the case."

Fails to Recall Talk.

"Q. Can you recall substantially what was said?"

"—A. No."

"Q. Well, then, from your recollection now of what was said in that conversation, have you any memory at all as to whether those jurors agreed with you in your opinion, either one way or the other?"

"—A. Well, the inference was that they did."

"Q. That they did?"

"—A. Yes, sir."

"Q. How many jurors did you talk to?"

"—A. No, I don't. In fact I don't know more than two or three men's names on the jury, although I have heard them called."

"Q. Do you know whether they have been called on the jury yet?"

"—A. I think they have."

"Q. Are any of them sitting there with you now in the panel?"

"—A. No."

"Q. Have you talked with other people besides those jurors about this case?"

"—A. One."

"Q. Did you talk about it at home?"

"—A. Oh, I just mentioned it at home. My people at home are not interested in the facts."

"Q. Have you any family?"

"—A. My wife."

Discussed Case with Wife.

"Q. Did you ever discuss it with your wife?"

"—A. Not more than to mention it was coming up in court."

"Q. You told her, did you not, that you were down here on this panel, and that you would probably have to serve in this case?"

"—A. I told her I was here, but I didn't think I would have to serve."

"Q. Why?"

"—A. Well, I thought the box would be filled before they ever got to me."

"Q. Did you say that you did not think you would have to serve because you had already made up your mind about the matter?"

"—A. No."

"Q. You did not discuss that at all?"

"—A. No."

"Q. Did you ever discuss it around the store where you worked, with your fellow employees?"

"—A. With one."

"Q. Did he purport to know anything about the facts?"

"—A. No."

"Q. You asked him what he knew about the facts, was that it?"

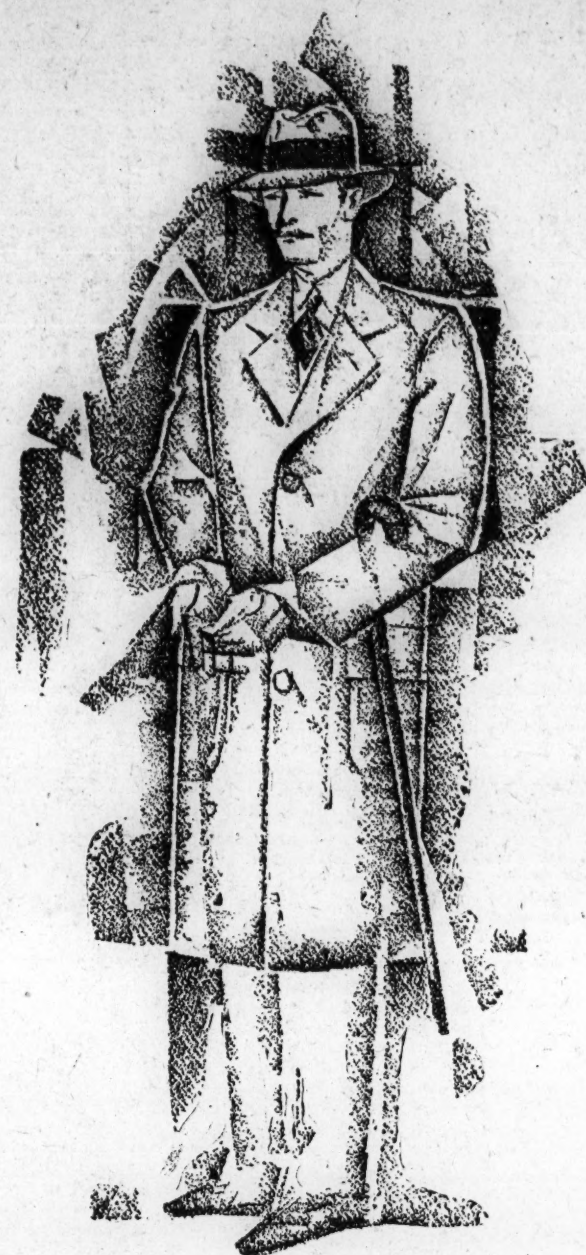

"—A. No, we simply discussed it, and he expressed his opinion."

"Q. And you expressed yours?"

"—A. I did."

"Q. How long has it been since you talked with that fellow employee in the store with reference to the matter?—A. On Thursday, I think, of last week.

"Q. On Thursday of last week?"

Had Expressed Opinion.

"Q. So that on Thursday of last week, from what you had read and from whatever you had seen, and from whatever discussion you had had with other people, you had an opinion which you expressed to a fellow employee in the store?"

"—A. Yes, sir."

"Q. When you came down here on Friday you had that opinion to the extent that you talked with your fellow jurors about it. That is true, is it not?"

"—A. Yes."

"Q. And you still have that opinion, have you not, Mr. Goulder?"

"—A. Well, I have answered that question."

"Q. Just answer it again, please. Has anything happened between Friday and this minute, while you are standing there, to change that opinion you had last Friday and last Thursday?"

"—A. Well, something has happened to weaken it, I would say."

"Q. Have you talked with somebody since then?"

"—A. Yes."

"Q. Since last Friday?"

"—A. Oh, no. I have not talked with anybody since last Friday."

"Q. Without asking you what you said or anything of that sort, as it were, something that you have read, or something that you have heard, which has caused you to make a modification of your opinion?"

"—A. Only what I have read."

Tells of Reading Newspapers.

"Q. Oh, no, I do not mean that. I am not asking you about that, but since last Friday you have read something with reference to this particular case that was coming on for trial?"

"—A. Yes, sir."

"Q. Did you believe what you read then?"

"—A. Well, all I read was concerning the selection of the jury, or something like that."

"Q. No account that purported to state authoritatively any of the facts?"

"—A. No; I didn't read that."

"Q. Anything which purported to state authoritatively the history of the case, or anything of that sort?"

"—A. No; I didn't read that."

"Q. Well, but the fact that you had read that the case was coming up, and that a jury was to be selected, caused you to change your opinion?"

"—A. Well, to some extent, yes. When you are sitting on a jury you feel that you are bound by an oath to do justice to both sides."

"Q. That is right—A. And of course that is the effect."

"Q. Now, you understand, Mr. Goulder, that what we are seeking to do is to obtain a jury that is impartial between the Government and the defendants, a jury of which each member has no fixed definite opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendants before they hear the evidence in this case. You understand that, do you not?"

"—A. I understand that."

"Q. And you would want that sort of a jury if you were on trial, would you not?"

"—A. I certainly would."

Court Excuses Juror.

The prospective juror at this point was delivered during the last 20 minutes of the morning session. The Government's special counsel leaned comfortably against the rail facing the jurors and addressed them in conversational tone, without showing any emotion other than that naturally accompanying the serious parts of his charge.

His opening address was as follows:

"In submission to your honor, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, you have been sworn now to try a case which, under the usual procedure of the courts, requires that Government counsel should, as it is usually called, open the case to you. That opening should not be an argument, and will not be an argument, as I will make it for you. The purpose of such an opening statement is to acquaint you, ladies and gentlemen, with what the case is and with what the Government expects to prove. The only purpose of such an opening is to make it more convenient for you, easier for you, if possible, to follow the case through and to see somewhat better what the evidence means as it goes in before the jury."

Tells of Conspiracy Charge.

"Now, as you have been told, these defendants are put upon their trial upon an indictment for conspiracy. There is no magic about the word 'conspiracy.' It means an agreement, under the statute here, by any means or in any manner to defraud the United States. And such a conspiracy is never indictable, or a verdict of guilty justified, unless the conspirators, according to your finding, have done at least one act after they formed their agreement, toward the consummation of that agreement. In other words, as I understand the law—and, of course, all I say now is, subject to what his honor will tell you is the law, of course—the mere agreement of the parties, under the United States law, is not enough, but some one or more acts—one is enough—must be done by the conspirators pursuant to their agreement to defraud the United States in any means or manner."

"As I say, all that 'conspiracy' means is an agreement. As is usual in such cases, the Government will not present proof to you here of any individual overbearing the parties agreeing, but will ask you to judge whether there was such an agreement or understanding between the two defendants from what they did and what they did not do, based upon the facts and circumstances in the case, toward a conspiracy to defraud the United States. I could hardly refer more to that than to say it might be defrauded out of its money, it might be defrauded out of its rights, it might be defrauded out of its property. Any one of those three things. In this case, as in every case, it is incumbent upon the Government to have an indictment."

Indictment is Outlined.

"That indictment means nothing, so far as proof is concerned. It is the mere formal statement of what it is the Government charges. These defendants are entitled to know what they are charged with. The jury is entitled to know what the charge is that the Government makes, and how it makes out this alleged conspiracy. The indictment is also for your guidance and for the guidance of us all in the matter of the determination of what the Government says was done. In itself it is no proof. The Government must bring proof in support of the indictment."

Now, the indictment alleges here that back in 1915 the President of the United States, by a proclamation, set aside some 9,000 acres of land out in Wyoming, as a naval reserve, to be reserved for the sole use or benefit of the United States Navy. That land was set aside out of the public lands of the United States, which otherwise would be open to settlement and entry by farmers, planters and others. This land was taken out of the public lands and set aside as a reserve.

"Then along in 1920 came the act, as the indictment alleges, as you will find; this act of 1920 puts that, and other naval reserves, under the exclusive control, for conservation, use and so forth, of the Secretary of the Navy. It gave him the authority to deal with these reserves in the way specified in that act.

"Subsequent to that, in 1921, the President made an executive order, purporting to transfer the administration of this and other reserves from the Navy to the Interior Department, of which Mr. Fall, one of the defendants here, was the chief—was the Secretary—and, as the indictment alleges, after that executive order was made transferring the thing from the Navy Department to the administration of the Interior Department, Secretary Fall assumed and undertook to act in connection with these reserves. The indictment alleges that there were many people desirous of taking leases on these reserves for getting out oil and gas, and many people competent to serve the Government in that respect.

"The indictment alleges that Mr. Sinclair was anxious for such a contract and that he and Secretary Fall conspired—that is, corruptly agreed—to do an unlawful thing. Now, what was that? It alleges that they conspired to defraud the United States of its rightful property by not having competition for those leases, but arranging by special terms, and by private arrangement, that Mr. Sinclair, or a company nominated by him, should have these leases. Handing them over to the policy of the United States, or overturn it, which policy was to conserve these reserves for the use of the Navy, and instead to exploit them to have the oil taken out of the ground, to the advantage of Mr. Sinclair and his company, that there was favoritism in the letting of that lease; that there was secrecy in the letting of that lease, and that all of this was arranged and agreed between this officer of the Government and this gentleman who was desirous of getting a contract out of the Government.

Overt Acts Charged.

"In a word, without reading the indictment, I will tell you the indictment alleges a conspiracy improperly to favor Mr. Sinclair and his company, and to defraud the Government, by secrecy and by this prearrangement as against public and open competition for these leases.

"This indictment charges several overt acts, that is, the reading of letters and the doing of other things in connection with it. That, in brief, is the indictment in this case.

"Now, it becomes my duty to say to you what the Government expects to prove to you to support that charge of conspiracy.

"The Government will prove what I have just mentioned to you, that the reserve was set aside for the exclusive use or benefit of the Navy. The court and you will take notice of the act of June 4, 1920, which puts that thing under the Secretary of the Navy and the executive order by which the President, President Harding, attempted to transfer that from the Navy to the Interior Department, of which Secretary Fall was the Secretary. He was Secretary of the Interior at that time.

"Then the Government will prove that Secretary Fall assumed full control of the thing and that, in effect, I am in charge here and will do as I please and see best for these reserves."

Conference in New Mexico.

"We will show you that Secretary Fall devised a plan which plan was necessary to that afterwards was devised here, of exchanging this oil, as came out of the ground, for storage tanks on the sea coast, instead of selling the oil to the Treasury of the United States. We will show you that about January, 1922, Mr. Sinclair went down to Three Rivers, N. Mex., where Secretary Fall was at his home, and there inquired whether a lease could be gotten upon Teapot Dome; that is, this reserve in Wyoming. We will show you that as a result of that inquiry Secretary Fall immediately became active, immediately instituted inquiries as to encumbrances on the land that there might be standing in the way of the lease; immediately, when he came back to Washington, met in conference with Mr. Sinclair, called the Navy people in a conference, and immediately, within five days after Fall was back here in Washington, a long and complicated proposition was received from Mr. Sinclair, which had been located years back on that reserve; and that Mr. Sinclair had made an agreement to pay $1,000,000 in effect, postponed in time of payment, for those claims.

"Now, we will show you, as I say, that on February 18, Sinclair's proposition having been dated February 3—of February 18, Fall ordered a lease to be begun to be drafted with Sinclair.

"We will show you that the lease was drafted over a period of weeks, mostly in Sinclair's office in New York, and not in the office of the Interior Department in Washington, as it was to be.

"We will show you that that lease was about ready to be consummated in March, and in March Mr. Sinclair made a formal proposition for a second lease, following the first, and in that proposition Mr. Sinclair agreed to turn in all the claims that were on this reserve, called placer mining claims, which had been located years back on that reserve; and that Mr. Sinclair had made an agreement to pay $1,000,000 in effect, postponed in time of payment, for those claims.

"Now, that was the situation on March 11. The Government will show you that Secretary Fall was visited after that by several people who were interested in getting the situation on the Interior Department, and Secretary Fall had not made up his mind to do any leasing, and when the Interior Department made up its mind to do any leasing he would be given a chance. And that he never was told this until after this lease was made.

"We will show you that another man was anxious to make a lease and came to Washington to see Secretary Fall, and that he wanted to make a lease on the Teapot Dome, but that Mr. Fall didn't tell him what Mr. Sinclair's claims were, in full. He did leave, and that on that day he looked the lease in the drawer at the department and said that he was going to his home at Three Rivers, and nothing should be given out about that lease; that he didn't want anything given out about that lease until the other contract, the one with the Pan-American Co., a contract of some value in California, should be given. And that as a result of his instructions no information could be given. That people who were inquiring what was being done about the Teapot Dome were put off with the statement that nothing was being done, and with the statement that nothing was going to be done, when all the time he was up in his desk was the lease, and he told his subordinates to give out no information about it.

Tells of Liberty Bonds.

"Now that lease became effective about mid-April, 1922, and the Government will show you that the irregularities which I have outlined to you in the very brief way, and which the evidence will develop much more fully, at the time with respect to that immediately after that, in the month of May, 1922, Secretary Fall's own son-in-law, Mr. Everhart, appeared at Pueblo, Colo., with $230,000 worth of Liberty bonds, 3½ per cent Liberty bonds, which were used by Mr. Fall, turned over to him, in part, and used to pay his debts, in part, and used to make the down payment on the company which he owned in the West, in New Mexico.

"We will show you that those bonds were obtained as dividends in a transaction which I shall try now to make clear to you, and which is a little bit complicated. Along in November, 1921, a man named Humphreys had a big oil field in Texas. He had, I think, more oil than money. He found it necessary to sell some of his oil, as we shall show you. He got in touch with the Standard Oil interests and the Sinclair consolidated interests, the Prairie Oil & Gas interests, to sell some of that oil. And as a result of negotiations he arranged to sell 33,000 barrels of that oil for $100,000, that is, to be sold at 30 cents as it was produced out of the wells. When he came to sign the contract he was told that he was to sell that oil to the Continental Trading Co., Ltd. of Canada. He said, 'I have never heard of it.' Well, they said, 'You make out the contract, and we will have our lawyers send it to you. He and his lawyers said, 'Well, we don't know that company.' Well, they said, 'The Sinclair and the Crude Oil Company, which is a subsidiary of the Continental Trading Co., Ltd. of Canada, I know those companies. I will send you the contract, and they say so. Mr. Sinclair was present at that meeting.

"In short, ladies and gentlemen, we will show you that from October, 1921, to February, 1922, Mr. Fall dealt with this thing alone, not as is done in a formal proposition for a second lease, ordinary way in the department; but as an extraordinary way; that Mr. Fall carried on these negotiations with Sinclair alone. That other people were anxious to make contracts and leases and that that Secretary Fall put them off and told them it was not worth while to tell them all sorts of things and said that it was not the fact that he had no lease with Sinclair, and then he closed that lease with Sinclair, keeping all competitors out of the way. And that there was no competition for these leases; no opportunity to anybody else and no bids for it, but private negotiation for that lease.

Need for Lease Questioned.

"In short, again, we will show you that between October, 1921, and February, 1922, Secretary Fall was advised by his own people in his own department that there was no necessity for making this lease for the purpose of protecting the reserve from draining, and in spite of that he writes, in his own hand, that it is necessary to do it to protect the reserve from draining and orders a lease on the whole reserve—not on the borders, but on the whole reserve, immediately on the heels of the report that such a thing is not required.

"We will show you that all during this time the people were inquiring, and were being put off, and told that no leases would be made on the reserve, at the time when leases and negotiations were going on with Mr. Sinclair.

"We will show you that on April 7, 1922, Secretary Fall signed this lease with Mr. Sinclair's company, the Mammoth Oil Co., the company Mr. Sinclair got up and organized to take up this lease, and that on that day he looked the lease in the drawer at the department and said that he was going to his home at Three Rivers, and nothing should be given out about that lease; that he didn't want anything given out about that lease until the other contract, the one with the Pan-American Co., a contract of some value in California, should be given. Russia after he bought a couple pieces of land in Texas and, therefore, he had to have this money. But we will show you that, although that was the story given out, that money went into Mr. Fall's bank account, and all but about $2,500 of it stayed there for a year and was not used.

"We shall show you further, ladies and gentlemen, that Mr. Fall sold those bonds and banked the money for twenty-five thousand and six hundred some odd dollars, and we shall show that Mr. Fall gave Mr. Sinclair a note for $25,000. But more than that, the note was not given to Mr. Sinclair. We shall show you that the note was given to Mr. Zevely, Mr. Sinclair's counsel; but until the Senate investigated the matter it was not known a note had been given, and no payment has been made on it.

"And that, taken together with the other Liberty bond transaction, we shall show you ties up the other transactions, and ties up the secret dealings and transactions between these men over a period of four months, and shows such a trend of private dealing, collusion, favoritism, exclusion of other persons, exclusion of other persons, desiring to deal with reference to the Teapot Dome, and transactions between these men as constituting a conspiracy to defraud the Government of its property, the naval reserve; of its right to have its contract let fairly and in competition, all of which the Government alleges were intended to be overruled by the corrupt and improper agreement between a private citizen and a Government official.

Littleton Opens for Defense.

Littleton stood at ease before the jurors, with his hands in the side pockets of his coat as he began his address and spoke to them in conversational tones without any attempt at oratory, even when he came up to his subject. As he proceeded he raised his voice to greater volume in seeming emphasis of his remarks and drove his points home with dramatic gestures. He will conclude his opening statement when court convenes this morning. In his opening statement yesterday he began as follows:

"May it please your honor and ladies and gentlemen of the jury, Mr. Roberts has outlined in short fashion what he proposes to prove on behalf of the Government. He has stated to you the object or purpose of an opening statement, and with that statement of his I can do no fault. It is the object and purpose of the opening statement to acquaint the jury with the evidence which will be produced on behalf of the person or persons whom the opening statement is made.

"In this case these defendants are charged with a crime. That crime is conspiracy, a conspiracy to defraud the Government, and anticipating, as he did, in advance somewhat of the definition, that we may start with some preliminary remarks. I may say that in substance you will be told that a conspiracy is a corrupt agreement between two or more persons to do a criminal act or an unlawful act, or to do an agreement between two or more persons to do a lawful act in a criminal or an unlawful manner.

Indictment Is Discussed.

"The definitive distinctive charge in this indictment is the crime of conspiracy, that crime that is defined to you ultimately by his honor, and from whose definition and description you will take your guidance.

"The indictment in this case charges that the defendants Fall and Sinclair—and when I refer to them in short phrase as Fall and Sinclair I do so simply to save time, and not to show any opening statement—that the defendants Fall and Sinclair conspired, combined and confederated to defraud the Government, first, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and secondly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and thirdly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and fourthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and fifthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and sixthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and seventhly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and eighthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and ninthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and tenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and eleventhly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twelfthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and thirteenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and fourteenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and fifteenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and sixteenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and seventeenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and eighteenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and nineteenthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twentiethly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-firstly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-secondly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-thirdly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-fourthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-fifthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-sixthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-seventhly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-eighthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and twenty-ninthly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and thirtiethly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and thirty-firstly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and thirty-secondly, of the oil which was in the Teapot Dome, and thirty-thirdly, Battle, Long Brewing, Held Likely to Extend to Congress.

Representatives of the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Operative Builders Association, Real Estate Board and District Bar Association appeared before the District Commissioners and filed objection to the proposed oath. The majority of the members of the Board of Trade and particularly to the administration of an Informal oath of office to its members by the Commissioners.

Representatives of some of the organizations here represented that proposals have been made to enlarge the advisory powers of certain bodies and that the Board of Trade, representing the citizens of the District, "were the opening words of a prepared statement" on the subject.

George H. Graham, president of the Board of Trade,

However, oral statements were made supplemental to the prepared statements and the speaker was given the opportunity to be named with more or less feeling. None of the members of the committee stated anything specific about the need to "reinforce the advisory powers of certain bodies," and no one seemed able to shed light on the reference.

It is known of no such movement to enlarge the powers of the council," said James G. Yaden, its chairman. "I am sure no such proposals have been made."

George C. Havener, one of its members, uttered similar sentiments.

"We will have something to say later," added Yaden, "but in the meantime I am quoted as saying that we will resist with my utmost vigor any effort to abolish the council or reduce its influence."

TWELVE THIRTEEN F

PARIS GAZES AS ASSASSIN DRAGS OF THE NOG GENERAL

Crowd Shocked by Exulting
Story of How Petura Was Tracked Down.

VICTIM CALLED CAUSE
OF 50,000 DEATHS

Heavy Reinforcements Patrol
Corridors at Trial of Schwarzbard.

Paris, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Fading red and black robes judged and tried in the dim Court of Assizes, Samuel Schwarzbard, blond Russian watchmaker, told exultingly to his story of how he determinedly tracked down Gen. Simon Petura and cold-bloodedly slew him to avenge the death of thousands of Jews slain in pogroms, he believed were instigated by his victim.

Shocked by the story the 31-year-old watchmaker told with shining eyes and hysterical grimaces, the 400 courtroom spectators gasped with surprise. White-headed Jews from central and eastern Europe sat beside rappers with bobbed hair and exchanged glances with Slav-faced Ukrainians as Schwarzbard told his story of the muzzie of his revolver.

Outside heavy reinforcements of gendarmes patrolled the corridors and the courtroom. Inside the gleam of candlelight struggled with the gloom of a murky Paris day, and a hush fell upon the courtroom as Schwarzbard began his story of the assassination. He told of how he had followed Gen. Petura, pistol in pocket, waiting for the moment when he might kill the man he considered the persecutor of his race.

Many who watched him tell the story, commented that Schwarzbard seemed more like a clerk than a murderer. Short, undistinguished in appearance, he seemed no different than many salesmen behind Paris department store counters. He was dressed with his story, the president of the court warned that there should be no manifestations from the spectators, as these might cause an uprising of racial feeling inimical to justice.

Peering intently at the lawyers and judges, Schwarzbard went through the story of the assassination with difficulty, finding the French with his command almost insufficient for his replies.

Then Schwarzbard rose to tell of his crime. He described in minute detail the trailing of his victim. He told of carrying a photograph of his victim, and of comparing it with the features of men he met. He related how he encountered Gen. Petura in the Latin Quarter, and how he followed him to his home, and how he met him at the corner of the Rue Racine and the Boulevard Saint Michel, alone.

As he rushed along, describing the incidents of the trailing and the encounter with Gen. Petura, his voice rose to a pitch of exultation that caused gasps of astonishment, the spectators being away to forgetfulness of the court's order for silence. Pictures Schwarzbard caused to dance before their eyes. Then with his head tilted backward, his face gleaming with almost boyish pride, he related the last moments of Gen. Petura's life.

Tells of Five Shots.

"Here's my chance I thought. 'Are you Petura?' I asked him. He did not answer simply lifting his heavy cane. I knew it was him. I shot once, twice, three, four, five times. He fell, and I rushed in on him. My only worry was whether it was really Petura. I might have killed the wrong man. When a policeman told me it was Petura, I threw my arms about his neck in joy."

At this point Schwarzbard, who had been reticent, threw his arms about the shoulders of the judge beside him. Schwarzbard denied that he had accomplices, saying his crime was the result of his own conviction that Gen. Petura was the instigator of the pogroms in which thousands of Jews were killed. He denied that Petura had begged for mercy, as witnesses had testified.

Rocking backward and forward while seated, in the manner of orthodox Jews chanting prayers in the synagogue, his eyes closed, Schwarzbard related the pogroms of several centuries, in which Polish C. h.olics as well as Jews were the victims. It was to avenge the latest of these, he said, that he had killed him, that he trailed and killed Gen. Petura.

Petura of Humble Origin.

Gen. Petura was the son of a Russian cabman. He became the secretary of the socialist group at K. and took an active part in socialist organizations. He was said to have been active in agitation against the imperial Russian regime and to have contributed to the disorganization and demoralization of the Russian army.

During Petura's tenure of power in the Ukraine, the defense will allege, 80,000 Jews were assassinated. This bloodshed was laid at his door in an attempt by the defense to excuse Schwarzbard's crime.

Elephant Editor Invited To Write Up Experiences

Conductor of Post Contest Considered Better Qualified Than Circus Trainers, Animal Tamers or African Explorers.

A large sealed envelope, magnificently crested with the insignia of a great publishing concern, arrived yesterday for the Elephant Puzzle Editor of The Washington Post. It contained an offer to the editor to write a story about his experiences in handling giant pachyderms.

"I'll start at once," said the puzzle editor, without hesitation. "Would you mind opening these 200 envelopes?"

He showed the day's work toward his subbed assistant, and buried himself in rosette dreams. The clock ticked on monotonously, people in and went, typewriters clicked, orders were barked and obeyed, traffic rumbled past the window. Through it all, the puzzle editor wrote, absorbed, his epic of the elephant.

"The style of writing worries me," he confessed at last to his assistant. "Shall I use dialect? Shall I try to do it in the style of the 'Uncle Remus' stories?"

"What a compliment!" chorried the puzzle editor.

"A deserv'd tribute," murmured the young assistant, in adulatory tones that hinted of a "rise."

MRS. GRAYSON'S FLIGHT IS DELAYED BY WEATHER

Reports of Disturbances at Sea Halt Plans for a New Attempt.

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—A second start of the Sikorsky plane, the Dawn, on a nonstop flight to Europe seemed more distant tonight than at any time since the ship landed here more than a week ago.

During that week conditions were never perfect, but tonight a cold, misty drizzle was being born in from the sea by a moderate east wind, with reports of disturbances moving in this direction. It appeared highly improbable that the flight could be begun tomorrow.

Mrs. Frances W. Grayson and her navigator, Brice Goldsborough today were the guests at luncheon in Portland of the Lions Club to whom they outlined their purpose of proving the worth of the amphibian type of plane.

Will Rogers Flies to Salt Lake City Packed Amid Mail

Special to The Washington Post.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 18.—While you are talking about progressing aviation, don't overlook this company, the Western Air Express. One year and a half ago they started with only 200 pounds of mail, packed in hen's packed around me, is 550 pounds. We are coming into Salt Lake—only been six hours from Los Angeles. They have done 650,000 miles, with only four forced landings and no one hurt.

Brigham Young might have seen more women than I have, but I have seen more of Utah than he ever saw. Who said this country was all settled up? Tonight we will see how it feels to fly at night.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

Good Wishes Follow American Girl—Heinkel Plane Is at Lisbon.

Porto, Island of Fayal, Azores, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—Still waving flags, a Doag cap as a reminder of her thrilling rescue by the steamship Barendrecht, Ruth Elder sailed early this morning for Lisbon, knowing that the clothes she had on were the same as when she was rescued. Her copilot on their transatlantic venture in the monoplane American Girl, and the two waved a vigorous farewell as the mail boat sped away from the city bathed in a brilliant moonlight.

The last view of the American aviator, who had captivated her hosts by her spontaneity and democracy, was the picture of a tiny figure aboard the Lima waving hands and blowing kisses.

"Has my luggage gone below?" was the first question she asked as she boarded the ship, and the crowd laughed, knowing that the clothes she had on were the same as when she was rescued. Her copilot on their transatlantic venture in the monoplane American Girl, and the two waved a vigorous farewell as the mail boat sped away from the city bathed in a brilliant moonlight.

Will Rogers Flies to Salt Lake City Packed Amid Mail

Special to The Washington Post.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 18.—While you are talking about progressing aviation, don't overlook this company, the Western Air Express. One year and a half ago they started with only 200 pounds of mail, packed in hen's packed around me, is 550 pounds. We are coming into Salt Lake—only been six hours from Los Angeles. They have done 650,000 miles, with only four forced landings and no one hurt.

Brigham Young might have seen more women than I have, but I have seen more of Utah than he ever saw. Who said this country was all settled up? Tonight we will see how it feels to fly at night.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

ADJUSTMENTS ARE MADE

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 18 (A.P.).—A second start of the Sikorsky plane, the Dawn, on a nonstop flight to Europe seemed more distant tonight than at any time since the ship landed here more than a week ago.

During that week conditions were never perfect, but tonight a cold, misty drizzle was being born in from the sea by a moderate east wind, with reports of disturbances moving in this direction. It appeared highly improbable that the flight could be begun tomorrow.

SHELDON OXFORD GRAYS

COLLEGE men have shown such a decided preference for Oxford Grays, we persuaded Sheldon to make a special line of them this year. Oxford Gray, for your information, is a good-looking worsted cheviot cloth dyed a real dark shade of gray. Men who know style are wearing Oxford Gray coats and vests in conjunction with striped trousers... a striking combination.

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

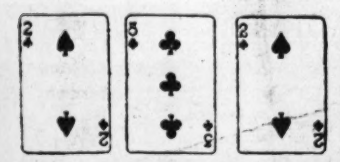

This week we are considering the question of original leads, giving each day a hand and asking what should be led from it against three different declarations.

YESTERDAY'S HAND.

♠ 10-7-6-2
♥ K-8-5
♦ 4-3-2
♣ K-J-3

It is held by West, South (Dealer) having obtained the contract in each case by his first bid. His three bids were: No. 4, one No Trump; No. 5, one Spade; No. 6, one Heart.

The card which should be led from the above hand in each one of the above cases is:

No. 4. There being only one long suit (four or more cards), it is the only selection to be considered against a No Trump contract; and as the suit does not contain three honors, the fourth best card should be led.

No. 5. A close choice between the Five of Hearts and the Three of Clubs. Neither the Heart nor the Club is an advantageous opening, but it is probable that either is better than the very weak trebleton in Diamonds. Leading the Four of Diamonds would look to the partner as if it were a fourth best. The Deuce of Spades should not be considered because it might kill honor in partner's hand. The hand presents a guess between the lowest cards of two different suits; but the Club seems to be a better selection than the Heart because it will work perfectly if partner have either Queen or Ace of Clubs.

No. 6. A four-card suit, even a weak one, presents better lead from this hand than a worthless trebleton or a King-Jack three-card suit.

TODAY'S HAND.

♠ J-10-4
♥ K-Q-6-4-3
♦ J-9-7
♣ Q-2

This hand is held by West, South being the Declarer. Three different contracts are given, the question in each case being: What should West lead? The contracts are stated in the answer blank.

ANSWER BLANK OF OCTOBER 19.

7. South deals and bids one No Trump; no other bidding West, holding the above hand, should lead.....
8. South deals and bids one Spade; no other bidding West, holding the above hand, should lead.....
9. South deals and bids one Heart; no other bidding West, holding the above hand, should lead.....

WIVES OF TOMORROW

By FRANCES McDONALD

Love.

DEAR MISS McDONALD: As I am a daily reader of your column and have experienced quite a bit of life and love myself, would like to write a few words about love—real love. How many people ever experience real love, or know anything about it? Very few. Love has to survive all kinds of tests of suffering and hardships, sacrifices and trials of patience and real love will live through everything and grow stronger, broader and freer through such experiences. But, if suffering causes "love" to fly out of one's life, then the test shows it is not real love.

Real love lasts through everything, and those cynics who do not believe in it have never known real love and will never know it. When real love comes we very soon know it by all the true signs. One of the most important signs is the birth of an unselfish feeling, of wanting to do for and serve the other—forgetting self entirely. Another sign is a wonderful feeling of seeing so much good in the other, forgiving and forgetting shortcomings and always striving to live up to the highest ideals of life. True devotion and sacrifice, service and unselfishness will not only win love but keep it. Remembering the Golden Rule and also that the beloved is human and not some super-man.

Of course if love is all one-sided it never reaches fulfillment. But I think and believe that when real love mates meet which is as God desires it to be they both know it. It is very rare though and those who experience real love are blessed, for they have understanding of divine things, for the true spiritual love that grows into a real soul-stirring love is the love that lasts and that poets write about and that every one in a vague sort of way is striving to grasp. That is why one marriage after another doesn't last. The parties are ever searching for the real love. Some do not go after it in the right way. Some are not strong enough to stand the test, for love will lead a wild chase but the peace that comes in the end is the reward in itself.

Georgetown Students Have Annual Retreat

More than 600 students of Georgetown College are participating in the annual retreat, with daily services in Trinity Church, which concludes Friday morning with a general communion. The Rev. Michael J. Fitzpatrick, S. J., newly installed rector at Gonzaga College, is conducting the Georgetown retreat on behalf of the resident students at the college, while the Rev. John J. Murphy, S. J., professor of apologetics, is conducting a separate retreat for day students. The retreat began Monday night with a general assembly of the student body in Gaston Hall.

Is she getting them?

FIGURE it out for yourself. A busy little fifty pounder requires over 2,000 calories a day. Many grown-ups need no more!

One fourth of all this energy comes from just one food—bread. Select it with care!

Corby's Mother's Bread is the only bread served in thousands of Washington homes today because careful mothers are demanding bread that is richer in the elements growing bodies need.

Firm, fine-grained slices, with their delicious "homey flavor" tempt the appetites of all the family.

Made with the very finest of ingredients—rich in the energy-giving qualities children need—Corby's Mother's Bread is not only more appetizing, but more nourishing as well.

Begin today to serve this delicious health-building loaf to your own family. Your grocer has it fresh from each baking.

An Exceptional ORIENTAL RUG EVENT

It is customary at this season of the year to have ready for inspection our Fall display of Oriental Hand Woven Rugs. We feel that we can conscientiously state that the present showing far surpasses any that we have previously made. All of the best weaves of Turkey, Persia and India are represented:

Namazi	Kenarie	Teheran
Kirmanshah	Ferrehgan	Anatolian
Sarouk	Khorassan	Turkoman
Senneh	idjar	Moussol
Dozar	Kurdistan	Zaranim
Hamadan	Mesheh	Oushak

Our tremendous output in three stores and the policy of having rugs made for ourselves, results in prices that are exceptionally attractive, and we invite your comparison of these goods with any to be found elsewhere. Whether it be priced at $25.00 or $10,000.00, each rug represents a substantial value, and each one is guaranteed to be a genuine Hand Woven Oriental Rug and has our unqualified endorsement.

The Homemaker

By NANCY CAREY

TODAY, as we proclaimed with our last breath yesterday, we are to devote our column to requested recipes, and the first on our list comes from a friend who wishes to know whether we have heard of yellow pickled cabbage such as our grandmothers used to make. And yes, we have; we have as a matter of fact, possibly the very recipe of which this friend writes, for it comes from a little book of tiny type which was printed just before the middle eighties, and that you may enjoy the fashion in which recipes of that day were given we shall print it here in our column just as they appear in this little volume.

Yellow Pickled Cabbage.

"This recipe recommends itself as of delightful flavor, yet easily made, and a convenient substitute for the old-fashioned, tedious method of pickling the same vegetable. Take a peck of quartered cabbage, put a layer of cabbage and one of salt, let it remain overnight; in the morning squeeze them and put all on the fire, with four chopped onions which are covered with vinegar; boil for an hour, then add one ounce of turmeric, one gill of black pepper, one gill of celery seed, a few cloves, one tablespoonful of allspice, a few pieces of ginger, a half ounce of mace and two pounds of brown sugar. Let it boil an hour longer. When cold it is fit for use. Four tablespoonfuls of made mustard should be added with the other ingredients."

Here, Mrs. Peter, is a pudding which you may find unusual. I am rather enjoying the strange fact that I had for you a recipe to fit your need of an "unusual" one, which is called "Judge Peter's Pudding," and comes to us from a Mrs. Siebert, of the far State of Nevada.

Judge Peter's Pudding.

1 ounce gelatin.
2 oranges.
2 lemons.
2 bananas.
6 figs.
Dates.
10 English walnuts.
2½ cups sugar.
Dissolve the gelatin in a pint of cold water, add the sugar, dissolved in a quart of boiling water, and juice of the oranges and lemons. Let it stand a few minutes, then strain and when partly cool stir in all the fruit cut in small pieces. Pour into molds to harden, and serve with cream, preferably whipped.

AUCTION SALES.
Mother's at an auction sale.
And filled am I with fear.
A leaf before an autumn gale,
When winter hovers near,
Is not, as she, so weak and frail
Before an auctioneer.
A toper, when the rum is out,
More willingly I'd trust
To see the glass and turn about
Than mother in the dust
Of rubbish, where the criers shout:
"What's offered for the bus?"
Temptations of the sordid kind
Her soul do not ensnare.
She has indeed a lofty mind

And loveth all things fair.
But she will walk ten miles to find
Somebody's ancient chair.
The rugged, loud-voiced auctioneer
She joys to gaze upon.
His: "Going, going, gone!"
According to some mental twist
Temptations lures us here
He has us all upon his list.
Each one of us is queer.
And mother simply can't resist
The loud-voiced auctioneer.

A Fluttery Frock of Petals

THERE is something about a frock of this type that is unfailing in its appeal to the feminine fancy. Every woman loves a fluttery dance frock, and well she may, for it is most generally becoming. This is just such a chiffon evening frock; it has a soft, fluttering petal drapery attached at each hip. The circular back section is joined to the blouse by a round yoke-line and falls low in the back. The main part of the dress is simple both in cut and construction, and it is through the multitude of diamond shaped petals that the gown gains the chic complicated effect. The back-line is both new and smart—an interesting compromise between the square and V-neck that at present vie with one another for first place in fashionable favor. The narrow belt, which is a youthful finishing touch, fastens directly in front with a charming buckle of two marquisse brilliants.

THE WIFE and CO.

By LYLE HAMILTON.
(Copyright, 1927, by Eugene MacLean.)

Names and situations in this story are fictitious.
THE STORY SO FAR.
Bob Brownell is engaged to pretty Molly Anderson, and works for Mr. Frasier, head of a wholesale stationery house. The boss has a dozen wives, and Molly goes to see him. He offers her $1,000 if she will go away and let Brownell alone. She rejects the money, but to save her sweetheart she decides to run away. As the last chapter ends she has sent her baggage to the depot, and is walking to the train.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HABIT and instinct, are stronger forces than we realize in our workaday lives. A man whose soul is torn with grief will puff a cigarette, and carefully knock the ash into a tray—though he may not be aware that he does so. A woman, publicly disgraced, ruined, sentenced to prison, will pause in the anteroom to powder her nose—though every nerve in her is quivering and in five minutes she will be in shrieking hysterics. So Molly, giving up all her hope of happiness, on her way to leave Washington and Bob Brownell forever, stopped now and then to look into the shop windows and study the displays of furniture and pretty things for brides to buy. She had been doing this for weeks, she did it now.

She didn't cry. Her bosom didn't heave. She didn't gasp and turn away as she realized what she was doing. Instead she carefully inspected the design and weave of all the rugs she saw, and even stepped into doorways for a closer look at objects of unusual beauty.

Only a pitiful pucker of her lips and a pallor in her smooth cheeks gave notice that Molly was enjoying her window shopping; that she was wretchedly unhappy.

At last she turned from F street and started along the quieter way to the station. "Somebody ought to fix this sidewalk," complained a familiar voice behind her.

Molly turned. Mrs. Potter, in her purple, shabby best hat and her very red best coat was kicking at a loose bit of cement upon the walk.

"What are you doing 'way down here?" demanded Molly, astonished.

"Following you," said the landlady. "The girl took a quiet step backward. 'I don't see what right you've got following me!'"

"Afraid you'd go jump in to Rock Creek or maybe the Tidal Basin," said Mrs. Potter, calmly. She took Molly by the arm, and steering her, proceeded toward Union Station. "Never can tell what a silly girl'll do, when she gets her first walking. But I notice you're still looking at furniture."

Molly's pale cheeks reddened. "I was just—I was—"

"I know," said Mrs. Potter, as the girl flicked her eyes over the wares. "You were just looking at the things you might have had if things had been different. I've been there myself. I do it yet—"

"Yes, I do," returned Molly, half at a loss. "I've treated Bill Potter half decent. Where were you bound for?"

"The railroad," said Molly. Mrs. Potter had let go of her arm, and was walking beside the older woman willingly.

"Going home?"

"Yes—I haven't seen papa and mama for so long I thought I'd better." Her chin was on her breast, but she spoke bravely enough.

"You snored," "It isn't for love of your folks that you're going home. What happened, anyway?"

Molly sighed, and then proceeded to tell her of the things that had happened. "I don't know what you're going to do," said Mrs. Potter, and all that had said to her. "And I could see he was right," she added, dolefully. "I wouldn't be anything but a drag."

"You would ruin his life, maybe. So I decided to go away and never let him hear from me any more, and some day when he's rich maybe he'll find another girl."

This final picture was too much for Molly, and she burst into tears for the sixth or seventh time since she had brought his bad news the night before.

"Better come back to the flat," said Mrs. Potter.

"I'll never go back," sobbed Molly. "I don't want Bob to find me, ever."

The landlady spoke with determination. "Well, you can't go home to your folks and spill tears all over the house. They'll think that something worse has happened to you. I know a decent little cheap hotel. Better stop there a day or two and get yourself braced up."

She took Molly by the elbow, and turning, guided her back the way they had come.

Fifteen minutes later they reached the place that Mrs. Potter had recommended. The lobby was very tiny, and a fat clerk was wedged behind a desk that seemed much too small for regular hotel keeping. It developed a moment later that the clerk was also the proprietor. He ushered the girl and the woman upstairs and back through a long, dim corridor to a room at the far corner of the house.

Molly accepted the room, gave the fat man the checks for her trunk and suitcase, and sank limply on the bed.

"Now do you know what we are going to do?" He paused, for dramatic effect. She patted him on the cheeks with both hands.

"What, honey boy?" she asked.

hat and coat on, staring at the door with wide, dry eyes.

The trunk and suitcase reappeared at 8 o'clock. The fat proprietor brought them personally to the room and waited until Molly had paid him the express charges.

After he was gone she opened the trunk, and she shook her head and, without unpacking, began to undress. Some time after midnight she fell asleep, and at 9 o'clock in the morning she was still slumbering, her head on her curved left arm, her cheeks pink again with the glow of health.

At 10 o'clock she ate breakfast at a restaurant near by, economically choosing wheat cakes and coffee. At 11 o'clock, back in her room, she was examining garments that she had drawn from her trunk, and repairing small rips that she discovered in them here and there. At 12 o'clock she went out for lunch. She had eaten breakfast only two hours before, but Molly was young, and her appetite was excellent.

When Mrs. Potter came, at 2, the girl was actively cheerful.

"Well," said the landlady, selecting a comfortable spot for her self on the edge of the bed. "Come the dawn, eh? Sun rising, birds twittering, little flowers blooming! Feel better, do you?"

"I feel almost happy."

"I know." The older woman took off her hat and tossed it to the floor. "At your age, the punker you feel one day the better you feel the next. At my age it's different. Have you decided what you're going to do?"

"I guess I'll go home tomorrow and see papa and mama. Then probably I'd better go to some other city and look for work. I've got more than $200."

Continued Tomorrow.

BEAUTY AND YOU

By VIOLA PARIS

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
DEAR V. I. Paris: I am 18 and have quite pretty hands, with this exception—the skin on my fingers; that is, over the knuckles; is very coarse and lined. I have been rubbing my hands with medicated alcohol for the last week; would this help them?

I have always had white marks on my nails and should like to know what is the cause and if there is any way to remove them. SUNNY.

Answer—It is, of course, natural to have a few lines over the knuckles, but I am sure that you could help this condition. Alcohol, however, would be too drying for the skin. What you need is a good softening cream. Almost any emollient cream would answer this purpose. Rub it into the hands, especially at night and, at least for a while, wear loose cotton gloves during the sleeping hours. It would also be helpful to give the hands an oil soak several times a week. To do this, partially fill a fingerbowl with warm olive oil and soak the hands therein for ten minutes. You can use one bowl for each hand. This same treatment, by the way, is excellent for rough elbows.

White marks on the nails may rise from one of several causes. Sometimes they are due to ill health, sometimes simply to bruises, and most often they are simply air pockets in the nails. There is nothing that you can apply externally to remedy this condition, but you can be more careful in the way you use your hands, guarding them against slight knocks of which you may not have been conscious before.

Dear Viola Paris: Can you give me a home treatment for moles? I have fifteen of them on my face. GERTY K.

Answer—There is no sure self-treatment for moles that I know of. I think that the most satisfactory method of removal is with the electric needle, which, however, should be used only by an expert and accredited operator. Your own physician could probably direct you to such a specialist. Properly done this method is permanent in its effect and leaves no scar.

Dear Viola Paris: Please tell me how to reduce the calves of the legs? I walk a distance of 3 miles every day. J. Z.

Answer—Walking, especially if it is done briskly, is certainly good, and 3 miles a day is none too much. You can supplement this by suitable exercises that bring the muscles of the legs into play, doing these night and morning for about ten minutes.

Stand erect, rise to the balls of the toes, then bend the knees and lower the body until the weight rests on the back of the heels. Rise without losing the balance, and repeat. Skipping rope would also be a good exercise.

Conduct and Common Sense

By ANNE SINGLETON

A NEW KIND OF ANNOUNCEMENT

"TELL me the correct form of announcement to send out when adopting a child," says a correspondent.

This really does amaze me, for why should a woman who is going to adopt a child want to make any announcement about it? It would seem to be almost as personal a matter as having a baby arrive in the usual way, and that one doesn't announce, except to an anxious family and friends, unless a small paragraph appears in the papers for the benefit of faraway relatives. Sometimes I have had letters asking me how a large circle of acquaintances could be informed, "now that sending the baby's card has gone out?" Sending a baby's card never was "in," as far as fashion was concerned; it was a great general, but never a smart custom. People related to the family or intimate with the family knew the birth because they were interested. The family never thought it in the least necessary to notify outsiders. So in this case, if a lady intends to adopt a child, she may have to go through with formalities to make it legal, but not to make it a social event.

In her place I should be satisfied with telling my nearest and dearest, and I should let other people find it out gradually. There is, at any rate, no correct form, sanctioned by etiquette. We should have to invent one, and I doubt if it would be used enough to make it worth while. I think it is a beautiful thing to adopt a child; a fine ambition to make a happy life—or a life as happy as the child's—for some poor little creature whose appearance in the world has been less than usually fortunate. But I don't think one should be worried about the social importance of it. Indeed, very few social customs have much social importance in society, except those rooted in consideration for common sense. You'd be surprised to know how little any other reason has to do with the behavior of the best people. And here, where the main point is that a new life is going to be cared for and started in pleasant surroundings (as I understand it), it doesn't seem to make much difference how the neighbors hear of it.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

To the limit of space, questions pertinent to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

RELATIONSHIP OF BIRTH AND DEATH RATES.

It is the relationship between the birth and the death rate, and not either of these alone, which is of interest to people who think about national racial supremacy. We spend much money and we use brains in reducing death rates, but reducing a death rate is nothing more than postponing the average age at death for a group of people. In time all must die. A high birth rate means nothing but trouble and expense if it goes hand in hand with a proportionately high death rate. Therefore the real question to have the answer for is: What is the relationship between the birth rate and the death rate?

In a recent study made by Methorst it was found that Guatemala was increasing its population faster than any other of a list of 55 countries by reason of excess of births over deaths. Its excess was 19.9 per 1,000 population, but Russia was a close second, having an increase of 19.5.

The rank of other prominent countries was: Mexico, fourth; Holland, eighth; Canada, eleventh; Australia, thirteenth; Poland, fourteenth; New Zealand, fifteenth; Panama, eighteenth; Norway, twentieth; Japan, twenty-second; United States, twenty-fourth; Denmark, twenty-fifth; Italy, twenty-sixth; Scotland, twenty-seventh; Czechoslovakia, thirty-first; Sweden, thirty-second; and France, fifty-fifth.

Separate tables for birth and death rates show that Russia has the highest of all birth rates—42.6—while it ranks tenth in its death rate of 23.1. Japan ranks twelfth in its birth rate and eighth in its death rate. Poland is thirteenth in its birth rate and ninth in its death rate. Mexico is seventeenth in birth rate, fifty-ninth in death rate; Italy, twenty-fifth in birth rate and twenty-sixth in death rate; Czechoslovakia, twenty-seventh and twenty-third; Panama, thirty-first and forty-fifth; Holland, thirtieth and fifty-first; Austria, thirty-second and fifty-third; Prussia, thirty-fourth and fifty-fourth; United States, thirty-eighth and forty-fourth; North Ireland, fortieth and thirty-third; England and Wales, forty-eighth and forty-sixth; France, fifty-third and forty-second; South Ireland, fifty-fourth and thirty-fourth.

Most of the nations that have a low birth rate keep themselves well on the right side of the ledger by keeping their death rate down. Switzerland keeps itself moderately secure in that way. But France and Soviet Russia are seriously endangered by combinations of very low birth rates with mod-

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.
The Parent Counsellor

Dr. Dean will answer all signed letters pertaining to parents' problems with their boys and girls. Writers' names are never printed. Only questions of general interest answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail. If written in ink and a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Address Arthur Dean, in care of this paper.

SUPPOSING you were a girl of 16, idolized by your mother, excellent in school studies, competent in household and an expert in making your own wardrobe—a model in every way. Just suppose.

Now leave your house in the daytime, walk across the street to a house which holds two friends of yours—a boy and a girl. All right so far, isn't it?

Now just suppose the three of you left the house with your girl friend on one side of the boy and you on the other and then the boy placed one arm in plain sight of your mother around the other girl and his other arm around you, and so walked on down the street.

Then your mother shouted out: "Come back to the house instantly!" The daughter has greatly resented this public humiliation and the mother asks our opinion. Very frankly, mother, I think you were extremely unwise and advise an immediate apology on your part. Tell your daughter that her mother had no more thought of mistaking her than does the southside of your house when the sunshine embraces the vine clinging to it.

"For sixteen years," you say, "I have found her to be everything I could desire in a daughter and now the ideal—my ideal—has bumped against the rocks when I saw her today."

I admire the training you have given her and that which she has acquired by heritage—capable in studies, household management and personal wardrobe—and above all, so open and clean-minded as to do what she did in plain sight of your window! But how could you, in a hasty moment, undo the work of sixteen years! But opinions differ: The bold thing," says your mother.

And another, "That's what the world's craterly high death rates. In fact, it is said that the population of France would be on the decline were it not for immigration and a higher birth rate among the immigrants.

Many will be surprised by the figures from Russia. They were figures for 1923 (the latest available) and for only 51 states (all that reported). Dr. Frederick Hoffman, who has recently visited Russia, tells me that they are getting the most complete sickness returns of any country in the world. He thinks their mortality and morbidity statistics are reliable.

Don't you think to some extent it is a teacher's fault when he has to excuse pupils from the class in order to maintain discipline. A FATHER.

Answer—Practically always a mistake to send a child out of the room. Of course, once in a while it is better to send the child out because the teacher does not want to interrupt the class work by dealing with the case at the time. Or else the situation will improve by a little enforced absence so both parties (not forgetting the teacher) can think things over.

The teacher who consistently sends children out shows a most decided weakness.

Wedding Presents for Dora

MODISH MITZI

Dora's getting married and leaving for Europe immediately has sent all her friends hunting for a suitable pocket size wedding present. Mitzi discovered a translucent ornament to be worn on an evening dress. It's of purple and green colored crystal.

White marks on the nails may rise from one of several causes. Sometimes they are due to ill health, sometimes simply to bruises, and most often they Aunt Sophie decided to give Dora some heirlooms in form of the antique jewelry that is now being worn—more, probably, than at the time it was introduced. The bracelets are wide with a medallion of agate and brilliants. It's fascinating jewelry to be worn with street or evening costumes.

Polly thought that there could be nothing more romantic than a modern interpretation of Empire jewelry. The necklace and bracelets match and they are copied from the antique by a very well known French couturier. Polly is trying on the flexible necklace in secret and wishing that she lived near enough to Dora to borrow it once in a while.

"What are you giving Dora, Dad?" asked Mitzi. "Something very practical. Something she'll need. Something that will relieve her husband's mind," replied Dad a bit mysteriously. "A safe for her jewels." But they're not particularly valuable, reasons Mitzi. "They look valuable enough to be stolen," replies Dad, which is a high tribute for the new costume jewelry.

BOND MARKET SHOWS

TREASURY DEPARTMENT SOFTENS

Deferent Effect of New Issues Seen in Prices; Polish Loan Oversubscribed.

GERMAN GROUP IS HEAVY

New York, Oct. 18 (A.P.)—A softening tendency marked the trading in the bond market today, although there was a disposition on the part of some buyers to bid up certain issues which have not participated in the recent steady advance. In the main the market appeared to have reached a point where buyers were limiting their commitments on the theory that prices had reached their top for the present. New issues were being lowered into the market in large volume in the past week, and others due within a short time, also had a deterrent effect on listed prices. Over a description of the Polish loan, reported soon after the offering this morning, was construed as a good omen, indicative of current easy money conditions and a fundamental soundness of the bond trade. Polish securities were on the down grade during the day, selling in large numbers as much as three-quarter point under yesterday's high price, and closing around par. German issues, however, were heavy and there were few offerings. Italian issues were in the domestic list shifted to such recently inactive issues as Federal Light and Tractor, Central Leather Co., "So" Line 5 1/2 and Texas Pacific 5s, all of which sold in low territory. Florida East Coast 5s and several mortgages which have been buoyant recently were under selling pressure. Treasury 3 1/2s improved fractionally on transaction, closing nearly $850, 4 1/2s, 5 1/2s, 6 1/2s, 7 1/2s, 8 1/2s, 9 1/2s, 10 1/2s, 11 1/2s, 12 1/2s, 13 1/2s, 14 1/2s, 15 1/2s, 16 1/2s, 17 1/2s, 18 3 CAPITAL MASONRY HONORED WITH 3RD DEGREE BY ORDER

M. E. Kahn, H. G. Kimball and F. M. Roller Receive Highest Award.

3 MORE OF CITY RATED KNIGHTS COMMANDER

T. M. Gorsuch, H. E. Hafekorn and Joseph Salomon Given Latter Tribute.

Three Washingtonians were included in the 486 Masons who were elected to the rank of knight commander of the court of honor and three other local men were among the 228 elected to the thirty-third degree of Masonry, the highest honor conferable by the Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Southern Jurisdiction, yesterday at the second day's session of the council.

Those who received the thirty-third degree were: Emanuel Kahn, Harry Gilbert, Kimball and F. M. Roller. Those who were made knights commander were Thomas Moody Gorsuch, Henry Ernest Hafekorn and Joseph Salomon.

Masons who render meritorious service to the order, and especially to the Scottish Rite, are eligible for these posts of honor. A limited number are elected at each session of the council.

To receive the thirty-third degree one must have been a knight commander for four years. The elections consumed the entire session yesterday, and last night the investiture was held in the House of the Temple, 1733 Sixteenth street northwest.

33 States Represented.

The 662 Masons honored at the election are representatives of 33 States in the country, the Canal Zone, China, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico.

Those elected from Maryland to the court of honor were: Forrest Bramble, Baltimore; Charles William Galloway, Baltimore; John Lloyd Harshman, Hagerstown; Morris Samuel Lazarov, Fikesville; Edgar Cordell Powers, Catonsville; William Mitchell Price, Baltimore; David Emrich Wegien Baltimore.

Those elected from Maryland to the thirty-third degree were: James Stewart Cruikshank, Baltimore; Adrian Le Roy McCordell, Frederick; Robert Morris Rother, Baltimore; William George Speed, Baltimore.

Those elected from Virginia to the court of honor were: Alfred Richard Hill, Schoolfield; Philip Cyrus Meyer, Richmond; Thomas Francis Middleton, Newport News; Herbert Dunn Northington, Richmond; Clarence Abijah Parsons, Norfolk; Frank Lamb Patterson, Roanoke; James Rodman Porter, South Roanoke; Francis Thomas Posey, Manassas; Lewis Allen Watson, Lynchburg; Charles Cleveland Wenrich, Manassas; Lorry Greenberg Wofford, Lynchburg.

Those elected from Virginia to the thirty-third degree were: Robert South Barrett, Alexandria; Frank Demorse Kesler, Roanoke; George Harding Lewis, Norfolk; Leon Wallerstein, Richmond.

Daughter of Attache And Governess Hurt

Oreta Lais, 6 years old, daughter of Alberto Lais, Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, and her governess, Mrs. Ida Spaggiari, 30 years old, were injured yesterday morning at 8:30 o'clock when the automobile in which they were riding collided with a car owned by D. J. Kaufman, 3809 Jennifer street northwest, and operated by William Sharpe, 33 Patterson street northeast.

The injured were taken to Emergency Hospital and treated by Dr. Ottman for cuts. According to police, Sharpe was proceeding south on Eighteenth street, and as he turned east into F street northwest the attaché's automobile, driven by Video Carelli, collided into the automobile.

Community Center Opens Season Tonight

Activities at the Central Community Center, Thirtieth and Clifton streets northwest, will open for the season tonight under the supervision of Mrs. Edith H. Hunter, community secretary. A city-wide dramatic group for the study and production of plays, and a class for the study of the construction and operation of automobile engines will be formed by the center.

The dramatic group will be directed by Dennis E. Connell. The automobile class will be directed by Edward Cornell, automobile teacher at Central High School. The Community Institute of Washington will hold its first series of ten biweekly events on Thursday evenings from November to the end of March. The first will be on November 3, when Signum Spaeth will lecture on "Jazzmania, a Musical Analysis."

100,000 Persons Join Highway Safety Clubs

More than 100,000 persons have joined the Highway Safety Clubs of the American Road Builders' Association since October 1, it was announced yesterday at the headquarters of the association. To become a member of the club one must sign a pledge to use caution and courtesy in crossing streets.

Fifteen thousand clubs have been organized in public schools throughout the country. Charles Upham, director of the association, who has been placed in charge of the safety movement, estimated that within a month approximately 250,000 persons will have joined the clubs.

Mother Named to Collect Damages.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Forsyth, 1534 Twenty-fifth street southeast, was appointed yesterday by the Probate Court as guardian for her 10-year-old son, T. Carlton Forsyth, in order that damages of $3,500 to be paid by the Capital Traction Co. might be received for him. Through Attorney Thomas M. Baker, it was alleged the boy's arm was broken on May 25 last when a bus in which he was a passenger skidded on the Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast Bridge and struck a girder. The company has agreed to pay the money, it was stated.

PHYSICIAN THREATENED; ARMED VETERAN SEIZED

Man, Who Asked Appointment With Dr. Talbot's Wife, Arrested at House.

HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

Bruno Marzano, 31 years old, former private in the World War, was arrested yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by Detectives Varney and Brodie as he entered the home of Dr. John Allan Talbot, 3026 N street northwest, whose life, it was stated, the man had threatened.

Mrs. Talbot yesterday morning requested Police Headquarters to send detectives to her home to protect her from Marzano, with whom she had made an appointment for 3:30 o'clock at his insistence to see her alone.

Varney and Brodie were detailed to the case. Marzano, they stated, appeared promptly at 3:30 o'clock, but instead of ringing the doorbell, as they had expected him to do, he entered unannounced, jumping up, they held his arms. A search revealed he held a pistol in a coat pocket, the detectives stated.

According to Dr. Talbot, the man claims to have served in France under the doctor, who was a lieutenant colonel in charge of Base Hospital 114 at Bordeaux. Dr. Talbot denies knowing the man. About a week ago, he stated, he received a threatening letter, which has been turned over to the police, from Marzano, who was then in Denver, Colo. Marzano was arrested last August for annoying Dr. Talbot, but was released upon investigation. No charge has been placed against him this time, but he is being held for investigation.

Dr. Talbot was not at home at the time the man called. His wife stated he had gone to get his children, who were in school.

POLICEMEN CHARGED IN POKER GAME CASE

Hesse Files Data Against Six He Says Were Caught in a Raid.

Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, yesterday caused charges to be filed before the police trial board against six policemen, who, he said, were caught in a poker game early Sunday when the premises at 2148 Pennsylvania avenue northwest were raided. He also indicated the trial board might be faced by the two policemen among the raiders who, he said, refused to divulge the names of the six policemen and who failed to report to their commanding officers the fact that blue coats were among those in the raided house.

The names of the six alleged to have been among those surprised by the raid were made public by Maj. Hesse as follows: Frederick Antonelli, H. S. Montgomery, J. W. H. Smith, E. E. Ditto, Claude Evans and J. E. Carroll.

17th Street Extension Receives Approval

Extension of Seventeenth street northeast through from C street to connect with Eighteenth street north of Benning road, was approved yesterday by the coordinating committee of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, as a recommended change in the highway plan.

It is also recommending addition to the plan of a section in the extreme northeast corner of the District near Chesapeake Junction by extending Sixty-third street southward to the District line to connect with the roadway extending from a subdivision in Maryland known as Maryland Park.

Another proposed change discussed, to be considered later, is one for widening Tunlaw road to 90 feet from Thirty-seventh street to Glover parkway.
